Warning out on con man using Ochoa's name

SOME local government officials have been duped by a man who called them up asking for money supposedly at the behest of Executive Secretary Paquito Ochoa Jr., the Philippine National Police (PNP) said on Saturday.

PNP Director General Raul M. Bacalzo said the "enterprising con artist" introduced himself as a senior official from Ochoa's office.

Bacalzo did not name the government officials who were duped or say how much was taken from them.

The con man, Bacalzo said in a statement, would call up local officials and ask for money and other perks purportedly at the request of Ochoa.

Ochoa himself had called up Bacalzo to report the scam.

The PNP has fielded teams from the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group and the Intelligence Group to track down the con man.

A similar scam was uncovered earlier involving a man who claimed to be a lawyer in the office of Interior Secretary Jesse Robredo.

The con man, who has not been caught, reportedly victimized some town mayors and chiefs of police in Bicol and Central Luzon.

PNP spokesman Chief Supt. Agrimero A. Cruz Jr. advised the public to report anyone asking for money for a government official to the nearest police station or to the PNP text and call hotline [illegible], or the PNP Public Information Office at [illegible]. [illegible] standing Soviet architects designed grand train stations that look like palaces. Among them was Alexey Shchusev, who also designed the Lenin Mausoleum. It's true that there are chandeliers and a whole lot more art in the Russian metro.

If you have time, include St. Petersburg in your Russian itinerary. Known as "the Venice of the North," the city was built by Peter the Great in the 1700s, as he was inspired by the more advanced cities of Europe. St. Petersburg is truly one of the most romantic cities I have seen with its countless bridges, canals, monuments and cathedrals.

As beautiful as it is to wander around the city on your own, it's best to get a guide because there is a language barrier and the signs are in Cyrillic script that uses different characters.

Indefatigable Mala G found our Russian guide, Olga, at www.olgarussianguide.com. She got us "express" tickets to all the worthy museums, and rare ballet tickets, but best of all, her encyclopedic brain helped us keep our Catherines and Nicholases straight.

We splurged and stayed at the Grand Hotel Europe, renowned for its Old World charm, premier location and modern amenities. Our original plan of ordering Beluga caviar was immediately nixed when we saw too many zeroes in the price. So we settled on Beluga Vodka instead and drank it like the locals do, ice-cold and neat.

Pinoys are everywhere. During Olga's guided tour of the Hermitage Museum, we had sightings of a sea of Pinoys also touring. They were all part of the Sunlife Insurance incentive travel.

Olga wondered if they are all relatives or just wanted a photo with our group since we had actor Victor Basa with us. As our group walked through halls of Picassos, Gauguins, Monets and works of the world's greatest artists, we had an idea of how terribly the tsars had lived.

One surprise to me was how many churches there are in Russia. The best is the Church of the Spilled Blood, built as a memorial on the spot where Alexander II was assassinated in 1881. This Byzantine-style cathedral is the greatest in all St. Petersburg, and Twitter-happy Ronan Cruz took a lot of photos.

A favorite spot was the Yusupov Palace, formerly owned by one of Russia's de facto families. Prince Felix Yusupov was also the architect of the plot to kill the infamous mad monk of Russia, Rasputin, also known as the powerful adviser to Alexandra, wife of the last tsar, Nicholas II.

There are palaces and palaces, but none as great as St. Catherine's Palace, built by Catherine I, wife of Peter the Great. Personally I found it more elaborate than Versailles!

A visit to Russia would not be complete without spending an evening at the Bolshoi Ballet and, for me, my favorite part of the visit. The Mariinsky Theater staged the original productions of "The Nutcracker" and "Don Quixote" and was the original stomping ground of some of the greatest dancers of all time, including Pavlova, Baryshnikov, Nureyev and Balanchine. We were so fortunate to catch "Swan Lake" during the International Ballet Festival.

Divina Lee, my co-designer on "Everyday Makeover Home Edition," said "I dressed so perfectly for the ballet." We noticed how the prima ballerina takes a bow after every act and flowers rain on the stage around her.

Our trip to Russia far exceeded my expectations. It is a country that should be on everyone's bucket list and wonderful travel destination. Best of all, it is a great reason to wear fur.

the establishment of the state of Israel in 1948. Since the 1970s an Israeli fusion cuisine has developed. It has adopted various styles like the Mizrahi, the Sephardic and the Ashkenazi.

It incorporates food from the Arab, Middle Eastern and Mediterranean cuisines: falafel, hummus, shakshouka, couscous and za'atar are now thought to be part of Israeli cuisine. Other influences are the availability of food common to the Mediterranean region like certain fruits and vegetables, dairy products and fish.

The tradition of keeping kosher affects the preparation and availability of certain foods. There are food customs specific to Shabbat and different Jewish holidays, such as challah, gefilte fish, cholent (hamin) and sufganiot.

New dishes based on agricultural products such as oranges, avocados, and others based on world trends have been introduced over the years. Chefs trained abroad have brought in elements of other international cuisines.
